Purpose of Grant Project

The purpose of this National Educational Alumni Trust grant project was to evaluate and develop the most effective strategies to retain meaningful electronic communications with alumni, students, prospective students and other friends of K-State. This is vital to an alumni association's core mission and success. With the continued surge and ever-changing growth of online communications, it has become even more important for alumni associations to identify and implement targeted strategies that have the most potential to significantly benefit and impact those constituent groups.

The K-State Alumni Association launched a new website with enhanced capabilities in May 2010. One outcome of this project is to gather timely information from alumni, students and campus collaborators about how they interact with others online, what electronic communication tools provided by the Alumni Association are most beneficial, and what we can provide to meet their needs in the future.

A component of our current strategy is engaging those audiences through the Association's website, social media sites, e-mails and e-newsletters. We now have the capability for members to view the Association's quarterly magazine online and can provide additional, desired connections via an internal community integrated with Facebook. With an estimated one in three online users now updating their social media status at least once per week, it is critical that we continue to recognize, plan and react to this medium's significance in the lives of our constituents.

Process and Timeline

September	The student intern was selected and she began researching other methods and practices used by Big 12 schools. Weekly meetings were held to discuss her findings and decide the goals of the survey.
October	Survey questions were drafted.
November- December	The survey was built and tested using the AXIO program.
January	The survey was available and data was collected.
February	Results were gathered and analyzed.
March	Compiled research and survey results into a comprehensive handbook and created a strategic social media calendar.

April

Handbook was completed and NEAT Report was written.

Throughout this process, the student intern subscribed to and received e-mails from various corporations ranging from retailers to restaurants. The student intern analyzed the design and purpose of the e-mails. Additionally, she participated in multiple webinars and read weekly blogs on sites like Mashable to supplement the research.

Scope

The Electronic Communications survey was open to the public. K-State alumni, parents of current K-State students, faculty members and friends of the university all took part in the survey. Data was collected from more than 6,000 surveys over the course of one month. The graphs and tables below shows the demographics of the audience surveyed.

Through the NEAT grant program, we hired a student intern to conduct research and survey alumni, current students and campus collaborators, with a focus on the following:

- Evaluate the current effectiveness and benefit of electronic communications provided by the Alumni Association to include components on our website, social media sites, e-mails and e-newsletters.
- Research strategies employed by similar alumni associations, colleges, universities and organizations to develop, maintain and enhance online connections with constituents.
- Gather survey information to help determine:
 - What information and interaction users and potential users desire from our website and other electronic communication vehicles (e.g. increasing interaction between students and alumni, club resources and tools, social media integration, career networking).
 - How the Alumni Association can further utilize online technology to support and enhance university endeavors through collaboration and ultimately increase the value of the Association to students and the overall university.
 - What beneficial information, programs and networking opportunities the Alumni Association can offer to its audiences not currently provided by mainstream social media sites.
 - How the Alumni Association can enhance its vital role as the preserver of traditions by identifying and implementing additional online communications strategies.
- Review results, determine priorities, evaluate resources, create and implement strategies to target different constituent groups.

Summary of Findings

Through the Electronic Communications Survey, and with additional secondary research that has been conducted from various sources, we feel confident in moving forward with our strategic communication plan. The majority of the findings from the survey were positive. For example,

- 94.5 percent of people surveyed responded positively to the question, 'do you find useful information in the Association e-mails?'
- 87 percent of people answered positively to the question, 'do you read/open e-mail from the Association?'
- 40.2 percent of people reported they read @K-State, the Alumni Association's monthly e-newsletter.
 - According to the Convio 2011 Benchmark Report, the national average is 24% for higher education.

As we suspected, there is a gap in the number of people who are using social media and the number of people who 'following' the Association via social media. By conducting this primary research we have a better grasp on how our publics like to be communicated with and what kind of information they are interested in. (See figures below)

Additionally, from other research we have discovered innovative ways to incorporate social media and we know the content that our audience enjoys the most. The graphs and tables below illustrate some of the most compelling results from the survey.

Summary of Conclusions

Based on these findings, the Association will tweak the way it corresponds with audiences to strengthen existing relationships. Some of these changes include posting items during peak hours in social media use and creating guidelines for how sensitive information will be handled. Based on a comparison of all other alumni associations in the Big 12 Conference, the K-State Alumni Association has discovered areas to enhance efforts.

These include uploading more YouTube videos when available and adding more features to the website, including city information and traditions information. This is a key element in preserving and enhancing Kansas State traditions. From our research we have also concluded that it would be beneficial to invest in another form of social media, such as foursquare, and we are getting that process underway.

By looking at what has been successful for not only other universities, but also local companies here in Manhattan we have incorporated promotional items in our social media sites as well. In March, the Association celebrated being ranked #1 in the Big 12 membership for the 15th year in a row by having a 15 days of trivia and prizes promotion on Facebook. The Association's Facebook page saw a large increase in activity and amount of followers during this time period.

Summary of Impacts

The NEAT grant the K-State Alumni Association received will impact the future office programming in multiple ways, including the creation of a Social Media Handbook, annual calendar and overall management strategies (See Appendix A and B). The survey results will impact the way in which the K-State Alumni Association communicates with its publics. With the information gathered, we know what type of information audiences prefer to receive on the varying social media sites, as well as through e-mail.

We also are hopeful for increased participation on our social media sites and in the Association as a whole. Additionally, conducting this research has led to the development of a Social media Handbook for the Association. This will be a vital tool in forming a consistent voice over all the forms of communication. It will establish guidelines and practices that the Association abides by, so that trained staff members will be able to contribute to social media websites with ease. The Handbook provides a list of the 'best practices' for each area of communication. This section shows what posts or messages had the most views or greatest amount of activity in a given period of time.

A calendar for the upcoming year was developed to help plan social media posts. This calendar will be very beneficial because it will allow the entire staff to be aware of the upcoming events and the kind of information that is going to be published on the social media sites. Other research combined with the survey results also will change the look and feel of e-mail communications over time.

Some strategies to publicize the Association's social media sites have already been implemented. In May 2010, Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn and YouTube icons were placed on the K-State Alumni Association homepage. These icons were embedded at the top of all e-mails the Association sends starting in March 2011 as well. The Association also changed the name of the LinkedIn group from the Kansas State Alumni Association to Kansas State Alumni to sound more inclusive of all alumni and just Association members.

Personal Reflection

I have learned a tremendous amount of information that will be useful in my future career in the marketing and communications arena. This valuable information not only includes facts I learned, but also research techniques and problem solving skills. I was forced to take the initiative and come up with creative solutions for new situations. This project was very flexible, giving me the freedom to take the survey results and present them in the best way I saw fit. The opportunity I had to work with a group of people and see how they conduct business has been an irreplaceable experience. From the research I did, on other Alumni Associations and through various outlets, I feel confident that I will bring a large amount of knowledge regarding social media to my next position.
